

STAGE SKETCH — β

Stage Sketch

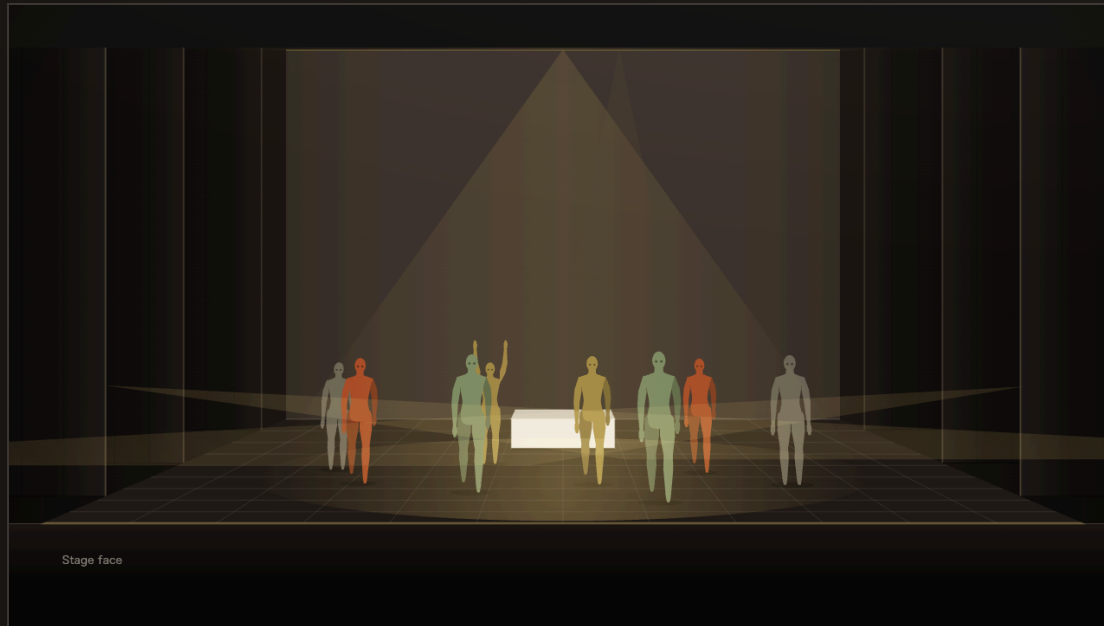

Quick Guide — the first 90 seconds

For everyone trying the beta

Front and plan, always in sync.

One stage seen two ways — move it in one view and it moves in the other.

Front — from the house. Add light, draw routes

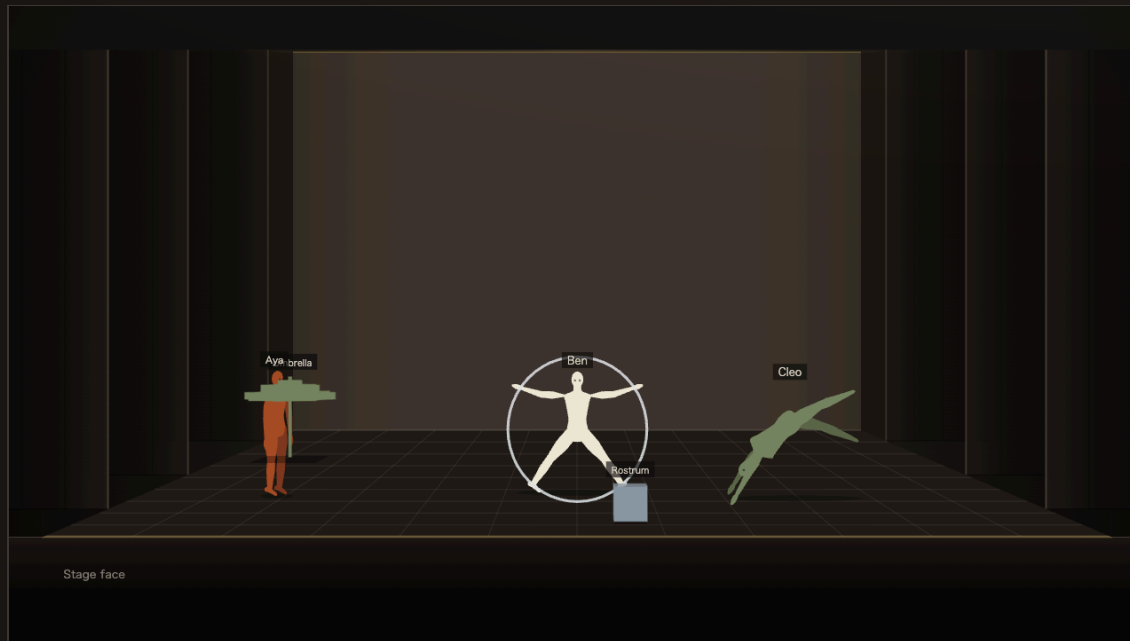

Plan — from above. The same eight people, right here

ON STAGE

What you can draw.

Performers and props alike — name them, then place them freely.

Three performers and a rostrum. Poses and facings changed; one is holding a prop (umbrella)

Place Cast, props and set pieces — position and facing

Pose 30 of them — side flip, Cyr wheel, unicycle

Lights Overhead, side, front and floor

Machinery Revolve, lift, curtains, water PC only

SCENES

Line scenes up into a show.

Build one scene at a time, name it, reorder it. The order of the scenes is the show.

The Map view, showing every scene at once. As the show moves on, the cast moves with it

Add NEW

Start blank, or turn the far end of a route into the next scene.

Section GROUP

Gather scenes into acts so a long show stays readable.

Cue TIMING

Set the length of each transition, and whether it goes to black.

SHARED SESSION

Watch the same screen together.

Open the invite link and the host's scene appears on your screen. Point at things with the laser pointer and arrows.

Talk over Zoom alongside it. The host drives the scenes; your job is to point.

リアルタイム共有 Live sharing

表示名 · Display name

Director

セッションを開始

招待URL · Invite URL

https://.../s/xxxxxxx

コピー

This panel is still Japanese-only. These are the two buttons the host presses: Start session, then Copy

Saved on this device only.

Nothing goes to a cloud. So whenever you reach a good stopping point, press Export and keep a copy. That is the only thing we ask.

Clearing your browser data clears this too. With an exported file you can always come back.

Three places to look.

Search the Guide

From Settings. Type a word and the answer appears on the spot.

Guide Booklet

When you want the long version — ten chapters of it.

Send feedback

One line is plenty. “I got lost here” is the most useful thing you can send.

Now — curtain up.